

Acknowledgements

We would like to thank many people for their important contributions to this study. Unfortunately we cannot mention them all here. In particular, we would like to thank Isobel Hines and Arthur Fleiss at the Department for Work and Pensions.

We would also like to thank James Banks and Zoë Oldfield at the Institute for Fiscal Studies who were responsible for the analysis and reporting in Chapter 8 and for their contributions to the design of the questionnaire and the analysis and reporting in general.

At the National Centre we are very grateful to all the computing, operational and research staff who contributed to the successful completion of the study, particularly Gursharanjit Gill, Erroll Harper, Elaine Iffland, Kevin Palmer and Theresa Patterson. From the research team we would also like to thank Margaret Blake who made invaluable contributions to the questionnaire and document design and Paddy Costigan for his contributions to this report.

Most of all we would like to thank all of the respondents for taking the time to complete an interview. Without them, this study would not have been possible.

The authors take responsibility for any errors or omissions in this report.

The Authors

Alun Humphrey is a Research Director at the National Centre for Social Research. He has carried out research in a wide range of areas including housing, health and employment training.

Paddy Costigan is Deputy Director of the National Centre for Social Research and head of the research group which carries out the Family Resources Survey. He is also co-author of a number of reports on the take-up of income-related benefits among pensioners.

Kevin Pickering is a Research Director in the Survey Methods Unit at the National Centre for Social Research. He specialises in the methodological issues related to surveys.

Nina Stratford is a Research Director at National Centre for Social Research. She has undertaken research in a range of areas including crime, drugs and social attitudes.

Matt Barnes is a Senior Researcher at the National Centre for Social Research. He has co-authored reports on low income, poverty and social exclusion.

Authors of Chapter 8

James Banks is Deputy Research Director of the Institute for Fiscal Studies and the Director of the Centre for Economic Research on Ageing based at the Institute. He is also a co-Principal Investigator of the English Longitudinal Study of Ageing.

Zoë Oldfield is a Senior Research Economist at the Institute for Fiscal Studies and a member of the research team for the English Longitudinal Study of Ageing.